

May 2010

At the High End Show held in Munich from May 6 – 9, Creek Audio and Epos displayed a number of new products – most of which related to current product development.

As this show is primarily targeted by the companies to their international distribution market, it gave those distributors who attended the opportunity to see what will emerge in the next 5-6 months and to give Mike Creek some input relative to their specific market requirements.

In addition to new products, then the current Creek and Epos models were prominently displayed and attracted a high degree of press attention.

Input Audio, the international distributor for AktiMate products showcased both the Mini and Maxi models and for the four day duration there was always a crowd of people asking about the products.

The Australian link provided a great talking point and Jacki found herself answering as many questions about the country as she did about AktiMate! It was the Epoz company name that drew many smiles.

There is certainly some new and exciting product which will be on its way to our shores in the coming six months.
